Assembly nears approval deadline

Bond issue vote set

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Three of the four bond issue-tax hike proposals GOP Gov. James A. Rhodes requested for Ohio's June 3 primary ballot are expected to get floor action in the legislature today.

Speculation remained high, however, on whether the Democrat-controlled assembly will meet Wednesday's deadline for legislative approval. Rifts within Democratic ranks could sidetrack at least the $2.5 billion bond issue Rhodes is asking mostly for development of Ohio's run down core city areas. A Rhodes plan for industrial tax breaks also seems in trouble.

The House Ways and Means Committee, which recommended approval last week of the $2.5 billion bond issue, left in the measure a proposed seven tenths of an increase in the four per cent sales tax. It would finance the bonds over the next 30 years.

Despite objections of Cleveland Democrats, attempting to win voter approval in June of a local sales tax boost, the committee kept the sales tax instead of replacing it with an income tax increase as was proposed, not only the House but the Senate as well.

Speaker Vernal G. Riffe Jr., D-99 New Boston, explained the decision by saying Rhodes served notice he would withdraw his support if the legislature proposed increasing the income tax. The speaker also said any drastic revisions would make the issue a Democratic proposition, rather than one by the Republican governor.

Riffe said he planned to call a meeting of the Rules Committee today to schedule a House floor vote for this afternoon. It would join another ballot proposals already on the Monday calendar, an amendment letting the state issue revenue bonds for housing, nursing homes, and senior citizen centers. The latter's approval apparently hinges on floor amendments intended to overcome opposition from Republicans. They protested changes made in a House committee.

At the same time, the Senate called for floor action on Rhodes' proposed transportation bond issue—trimmed from the $1.6 billion asked by Rhodes down to $1 billion. Majority Democrats also cut the length of the transportation bonds from 30 years down to 20. The governor's call for a nine-tenths of a cent increase in the gasoline tax remained in the measure as it left committee.

Rhodes' final proposition, authority for the legislature to grant major tax breaks to industries expanding or locating in inner cities, remained in the Senate Ways and Means Committee. A subcommittee scaled down the proposal sharply from the 30-year tax reprieves the governor requested. It comes up for further discussions in the committee this afternoon.

The governor's ballot package is expected to dominate this week's activities, but a handful of other measures were up for floor or committee action.

Rep. Arthur Bowers, D-98 Steubenville, has before the House today a bill to permit motorists in Ohio's northeastern snow belt to continue using their studded snow tires another month before the existing March 15 deadline. The emergency legislation would take effect immediately if the Senate adds its approval and the governor signs it.

Present law provides that studded snow tires may not be used on state highways prior to Nov. 15, and must be removed no later than March 15 of the succeeding year. Residents of Jefferson, Geauga, and other counties which get snowfalls as late as April requested the legislation.

The Department of Transportation sent representatives to testify against Bowers' bill, claiming the studs make grooves in concrete and asphalt that cost millions to repair. The grooves also hold water that freezes, and become a winter driving hazard, said Howard Bovard, the department's legislative liaison officer.

Bowers' bill sets the snow tire season at Nov. 1 to April 15.

A bill up for hearing Wednesday morning in the Senate Ways and Means Committee would suspend the sales tax on auto sales in Ohio until next Jan. 1.

Sponsoring Sen. Robert D. Freeman, D-29 Canton, said it is intended to boost auto sales and in return provide employment for workers in the state's auto, steel and related industries.

Last week, his bill may have received a boost from officials of the Chrysler Corp. who suggested a 90-day moratorium on sales taxes that would cover sales up into the spring when auto sales normally increase.

Coffee Break . .

THE REGULARLY scheduled meeting of the Washington C. H. Blue Lion basketball boosters club has been postponed.

Club president Ben Jamison said the meeting, originally scheduled to be held Wednesday, has been postponed until March 12. The meeting will be held at 8 p.m. at Washington Senior High School.

THE MONTHLY meeting of Bloomingburg village council has been changed from March 4 until March 11, according to Mrs. Irene Grim. The time of the meeting will be 8:30 p.m. instead of 8 p.m.

IT IS TIME again to renew dock space at Rocky Fork State Park. The marina offices opened March 11 for the purpose of renewing dock permits and issuing boat and motor registrations. Fees will remain the same as last year.

Those persons having docks in 1974 must renew their 1975 dock permit before March 31.

The North Beach office will handle renewals for the North Beach docks and the area cluster docks, while the East Shore office will handle those docks for East Shore and Fisherman's Wharf. Both officers will be handling boat and motor licenses.

Persons are required to bring boat and motor registrations and titles when renewing dock permit and watercraft licenses. All renewals must be handled in person.

Anyone not having a dock space in 1974, but desiring to rent one for 1975, may apply anytime on or after April 1 for spaces at the East Shore Marina. Those individuals wishing to rent a space at North Beach or Fisherman's Wharf should send a postcard to Rocky Fork State Park, Rt. 4, P.O. Box 363, Hillsboro, Ohio, 45133 prior to April 1 as the issue of unrenovated spaces in these two areas are on a lottery basis. At 9 a.m. on April 1, officials will draw out as many names as there are unrenovated spaces at each location. Those persons whose cards are drawn will be notified by mail and will have two weeks to claim their dock. There will be separate drawings for North Beach and Fisherman's Wharf docks.

The North Beach office will be open from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m. seven days per week. East Shore hours will be 8 a.m. until 5 p.m. Friday through Sunday. The North Beach will handle all rentals Monday through Thursday.

Dress rehearsal staged Sunday

Lions show opens tonight

A full dress rehearsal of the Washington C.H. Lions Club's annual variety show was staged Sunday afternoon in the Washington C.H. Middle School auditorium.

Approximately 50 Fayette County senior citizens were special guests at the dress rehearsal, which provided producers of the musical comedy program an opportunity to complete last-minute preparations.

The annual production, entitled "The Four Seasons," will be presented at 8 p.m. tonight and Tuesday in the Washington C.H. Middle School auditorium.

The show, which features popular tunes centered around the four seasons of the year, plus snappy dance routines and rib-tickling comedy skits, runs approximately one hour and 45 minutes in length, including a 15-minute intermission.

During intermission, Mrs. Earl Hartley will play a number of pipe organ selections.

The presentation of the annual production tonight and Tuesday will mark the end to nearly three months of practices and rehearsals by the 120 Lions and Lioness club members involved.

Rehearsals for the two-performance program were launched in mid-January.

The show raised approximately $2,000 last year and it is hoped that much or more will be realized this year. Proceeds from the variety show are used almost exclusively in the Lions Club's sight-saving program and much of the money is spent locally for eye examinations and glasses. There are no reserved seats for the two shows, and tickets priced at $1.50 per person are being offered by all members of the club and at the door.

Taylor Groff appointed

Hospital board vacancy filled by commissioners

The Fayette County Board of Commissioners announced Monday that Taylor Groff, 57, Madison Mills, has been appointed to the Fayette Memorial Hospital board of trustees for a six-year term.

Groff was selected to the board by the three county commissioners, Fayette County Common Pleas Judge Evelyn Coffman and Probate Judge Rollo Marchant to replace Donald P. Woods, whose term has expired.

Groff, who served as president of the former Miami Trace Board of Education for eight terms in the early 1960s, is currently manager of the Hockman Grain and Feed Co., Mount Sterling, which he has operated since 1940.

In other business Monday, the commissioners authorized repairs at the Fayette County Health Department, 219 N. Hinde St., to Cook Home Improvements, Inc. The repairs include installation of a front enclosure and storm windows to conserve energy with the cost not to exceed $1,036.35.

The commissioners opened bids for the Harry Flint (Post) Ditch Monday morning and are to receive bids for dry cleaning for the Fayette County Sheriff's department March 17 at 11 a.m. Final hearing of the Compton Creek improvement project will be held March 10 at 1:30 p.m. in the commissioner's office.

Chairman Ray Warner noted the county has received two new cruisers for the Fayette County Sheriff's Department, which were ordered in October, 1974, and a new vehicle for the Fayette County Welfare Department, ordered in January.

Cancer claims girl after dream trip

BELLEVEILLE, Ill. (AP) — "She got to see her dream didn't she?" asked Heidi Biggs' mother. "She got to see Hawaii."

Fourteen-year-old Heidi died of cancer Sunday, less than an hour after she was carried on a stretcher from a plane returning her home from Honolulu.

Terminally ill with a rare form of the disease, the trip had been her secret wish—the dream of a dying girl from a welfare family.

Her mother, Mrs. Lucille Biggs, said that at the end Heidi asked one thing more: She wanted to say goodbye to her younger brother and sister. But she died as the ambulance rushed her home to them.

"We wanted to take her straight to the hospital," Mrs. Biggs said in an interview. "But she insisted on going home. She knew it was her time. She wanted to see Toby and Eva before she passed away."

Heidi learned last summer she was dying and doctors said she had less than a year to live. Deeply religious and a member of the Apostolic Church of God, a fundamentalist church, she put her trust in God.

Her mother said that the girl's faith sustained her through the chemical therapy that disfigured her and through the pain that never left.

"I pray and I believe," Heidi said last Christmas. "I believe that if I die I'll be with God and I'll be safe with Him."

An Associated Press story about her final Christmas touched Russell Penny, a Canadian businessman in Sudbury, Ontario. He flew to Belleville to meet Heidi.

She told him what she had told no one else: she had seen a television travelogue about Hawaii and it was a place she secretly dreamed of seeing. Penny helped organize a trust fund for the trip and people from all over the country contributed.

On Feb. 15, with $2,400 collected, Heidi and her mother left for Hawaii. They planned to stay a week, but after enough money was contributed for Randy Hillman to join them, they stayed longer. Hillman was Mrs. Biggs' last husband and Heidi thought of him as her stepfather.

Mrs. Biggs said Heidi had 2½ days in the sun before she suffered a collapsed lung, was confined to bed and fell into delirium.

"She told me, 'Mama, I hurt so bad. I hurt so bad I wish I was dead.' I got her to recite the 23rd Psalm with me. She couldn't talk. She said the words in her head. She nodded when she finished a line."

"I think she knew it was her time," Mrs. Biggs said. "All she was waiting for was to get home again. She lay in my arms all night on the plane. I knew she was near the end. She almost made it home."

Penny, who met the plane, said "I'm completely shattered. I felt so close to her."

"She's not dead," Mrs. Biggs said. "She might have passed away, but I know where she's at. A lot of people don't know where their kids are. But I know where Heidi's at. God has got her. She's with God. I'm positive of that."

Common ground on energy eyed

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Ford conferred with Republican congressional leaders today, and one GOP spokesman said afterward, "It is certainly possible" that Ford will defer the second and third dollars of his oil import tariff.

Ford scheduled a 4 p.m. EDT announcement on his response to a Democratic proposal that he defer the higher tariffs while compromise talks are under way to shape an energy program.

White House spokesmen insisted after the Republican leadership meeting that Ford had not reached a decision. But Senate GOP leader Hugh Scott said concerning the tariff proposal: "It is certainly possible, given a spirit of compromise, that something may happen there."

Scott said that Ford didn't divulge any decision. Scott and House Republican Leader John Rhodes of Arizona emerged from the meeting with criticism of an energy plan prepared last week by Congress' Democratic leadership, but with praise for a separate plan presented by Chairman Al Ullman of the House Ways and Means Committee.

Scott charged that the Democratic leadership wants to "save energy on the cheap, and it can't be done that way."

"They aren't biting a bullet — they're biting a marshmallow," Scott added.

The Ullman plan, in contrast, is "much better considered ... much better prepared," said Rhodes.

Scott agreed, calling the plan put forth by the Ways and Means Committee chairman "a respectable and expert approach to the problem ... it certainly bites more than a marshmallow."

The Ullman plan calls for gradual increases in the gasoline tax to as much as 40 cents a gallon.

The first $1-a-barrel increase in Ford's plan to raise oil import tariffs has already gone into effect. The second $1-a-barrel hike was scheduled to go into effect this month.

Congress passed a bill last month suspending the President's authority to impose the tariffs, and Ford has said he will veto it.

Sixty-four per cent of the persons contacted in an NBC poll believe Congress should override the planned veto. Twenty-nine per cent thought Congress should not override the veto, and 7 per cent were unsure.

Continuing dissension seen at summit of oil nations

ALGIERS (AP) — Heads of state begin arriving today for the first summit meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries amid signs of continuing dissension.

President Carlos Andres Perez of Venezuela was scheduled to be the first arrival today, and Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi of Iran also was expected. But King Faisal of Saudi Arabia and at least four other chiefs of state were expected to stay away from the 13-nation meeting, which opens Tuesday.

The first summit ever held by the 15-year-old oil cartel is convening on the initiative of Algeria to prepare for preliminary negotiations with the oil-consuming countries due to open in Paris on April 7.

Algerian spokesmen at a preparatory meeting Sunday of the OPEC oil, finance and foreign ministers renewed their government's demand for enlargement of the Paris meeting to include producers of other key raw materials. They also urged previous Algerian proposals for an OPEC-wide reduction in production to keep the price of oil up, and abandonment of the dollar as the medium of payment because of the recent decline in its value.

Industry Minister Belaid Abdessalam told newsmen the Algerian government was dissatisfied with the 10 nations French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing invited to the meeting because it included only oil importers and exporters. He said the summit would decide whether the four OPEC members invited — Saudi Arabia, Iran, Venezuela and Algeria — would accept.

This appeared likely to bring Algeria into conflict with Saudi Arabia since Giscard's list of 10 was first suggested by Saudi Oil Minister Ahmed Zaki Yamani, undoubtedly with King Faisal's approval.

Saudi Arabia and Iran also played a leading part at the OPEC meeting in Vienna last week in postponing action on the Algerian proposals for production cuts and moves to counter the effects of the dollar decline. They are not likely to be any more receptive to the proposals at the summit, particularly since the Shah has his own pet proposal to preserve the purchasing power of his oil revenue by gearing the price of crude oil to an index of major commodities the oil countries must import.

'Domino theory' being revived

WASHINGTON (AP) — The old "domino theory" is being revived and broadened by top U.S. officials who warn of "serious consequences" for the United States around the world if Cambodia or South Vietnam fall because American aid is cut off.

The theory, formulated nearly 21 years ago as the French were on the verge of defeat in Indochina, held generally that the loss of one country to Communist aggression would lead to neighboring countries falling under Communist domination, one after another.

However, the latest version of the theory looks beyond Indochina for its predicted impact.

President Dwight D. Eisenhower spoke of the "falling domino principle" on April 7, 1954, a month before the Communist Viet Minh victory over the French at Dien Bien Phu.

Asked to comment on "the strategic importance of Indochina to the free world," Eisenhower replied:

"You have a row of dominoes set up. You knock over the first one, and what will happen to the last one is the certainty that it will go over very quickly.

So you could have a beginning of a disintegration that would have the most profound influence."

The French soon lost Indochina, but the whole area did not go Communist, a fact that is often cited by opponents of the theory. As a result of an international conference, the country was partitioned into a Communist North Vietnam, a non-Communist South Vietnam, and independent regimes in Cambodia and Laos.

The domino theory came up repeatedly during the national debate over U.S. military involvement in Vietnam in the 1960s and early 1970s.

Supporters of American involvement cited the theory as an argument for staying in South Vietnam until that country's security was assured. Opponents derided the domino theory as a myth.

Recently, Defense Secretary James R. Schlesinger and Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger have spoken of the domino theory amid a new battle with Congress over whether the United States should continue to support South Vietnam and Cambodia with arms, ammunition and other aid.

U.S. defense officials last week said neither South Vietnam nor Thailand would be seriously threatened if Cambodia fell to the insurgent forces. Like Kissinger and Schlesinger, they invoked a global domino theory and expressed concern that a failure by the United States to continue supporting South Vietnam would raise questions in Europe and Israel about U.S. steadfastness.

Kissinger said, "If Vietnam falls as a result of an American decision to cut off its aid, that will have, over a period of time, the most serious consequences for the conduct of our foreign policy."

He said this will not be immediately apparent, "but over a period of years it must raise the gravest doubts in the minds of many countries that have been associated with us."

Schlesinger said the domino theory "has been overly discredited." The defense chief said that the fall of South Vietnam, because of the withdrawal of U.S. aid, "will be viewed with concern by those with whom we are negotiating at the present time in the Middle East."

WASHINGTON REPORT

From
WILLIAM H. HARSHA
Representative To Congress
6th District, Ohio

"When President Ford first made public the provisions of his Energy Independence Act of 1975, I had some disagreement with several specific provisions of the proposal. I felt it was inflationary and inconsiderate of the low and middle income groups in this country. However, the President's proposal comes out smelling like a rose when compared to the program put forward by the Democrats in the House of Representatives," said Representative William H. Harsha of Ohio. "It would seem that their first priority is to present a plan, any plan, as an alternative to the Ford proposal. However, in so doing they are totally forgetting the working man, the consumer, who must bear the burden of their hastily thrown together programs."

"Representative Al Ullman, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, said his committee will shortly report out a 'comprehensive energy program' that will include a gasoline tax as high as 40 to 50 cents a gallon and eventual deregulation of oil and natural gas coupled with a rationing plan and an excess profits tax."

"My first response to this is to remind the authors of this preposterous proposal that gasoline consumption is only 40 per cent of total petroleum use. Residual and fuel oil comprise a substantial amount of total petroleum imports. By concentrating exclusively on private vehicles and gasoline, other fruitful areas for energy conservation are not addressed — such as improved industrial efficiency and better constructed and insulated buildings. In the final analysis, we cannot be independent unless these other petroleum uses are also reduced dramatically," Harsha continued.

"The Ford plan calls for a gasoline tax increase of from 10 to 15 cents per gallon; however, it rather pointedly omits a gas rationing proposal," said the Portsmouth Republican. "The immediate outcry from the Democrats was that it was too high. Now they are proposing an increase of from 40 to 50 cents per gallon plus a rationing program. Substantial regional inequities would exist in this instance. The average driver in some rural areas, such as Southern Ohio, travel nearly 600 miles per month versus about 300 in more urban states such as New York and New Jersey. Certain very poor persons must drive great distances each year. They can neither afford to buy additional coupons nor are alternative methods of transportation available. For example, the Sixth District of Ohio has no mass transit program to fall back on. Similar disparities exist between city dwellers and suburbanites. Under rationing each would receive the same gallonage. This type of proposal limits the consumption of gasoline not through price but through proscription."

Rotary Club slates joint meet Tuesday

The Washington C. H. Rotary Club will host members of the Greenfield Rotary Club at an inter-city meeting at noon Tuesday in the Washington Country Club.

This is the first joint meeting of this type that the Washington C. H. Rotarians have held for a number of years. Involved in the planning for the joint meeting were Paul Crosby, president of the Washington C. H. Rotary Club, and Harry V. Turner, president of the Greenfield club, as well as the program committee chaired by Carl Elberfeld, Wilson L. Moon and Bill Williams. Moon is a member of the Greenfield Rotary Club.

The Greenfield club will be providing the program for the joint meeting and the featured speaker will be Fred J. Milligan Sr., of Westerville, who will present an address entitled, "The spirit of '76," in observance of the nation's bicentennial celebration.

Milligan, a senior partner in the Milligan, Milligan and Milligan law firm in Westerville, has a long career of public and civic service. He has been particularly active in the Ohio Historical Society, serving as its president in 1963-64. He has continued to serve as a trustee of the Ohio Historical Society and is currently chairman of the Ohio Village Development Committee and expeditor of the $12 million state capital improvements program for historic sites.

He is president of the Ohio Information Committee, a statewide, independent, non-partisan political action organization. Milligan also serves as executive secretary of Sym-

Thieu paid off to sign peace?

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP)— Black activist Dick Gregory said Sunday that the United States paid $12 million to $15 million to Nguyen Van Thieu, president of South Vietnam, to sign the Vietnam peace agreement.

Gregory did not say where he learned of the alleged payoff, but said "the money was paid under the table."

Israel's whopping taxes

Generally speaking, others' misery offers but cold comfort. Still, Americans may find their taxes less burdensome in light of word bite in Jerusalem about the tax bite in Israel.

Since last July the government there has maintained a tough economic austerity program designed to curb inflation and reduce the country's balance of payments deficit. This policy had to be adopted largely because of a king-sized military budget required, according to Finance Minister Yehoshua Rabinowitz, by "the political and security situation forced upon us since and as a result of the war."

Whatever the causes, Israel's budget stands at a record 9.4 billion dollars. To pay for it Israelis will be taxed 57 per cent of the national income, the highest rate in the world. Their tax bill has just been swollen by a 7.5 per cent increase in the levy on many consumer goods.

Americans may not be greatly consoled by the realization that Israelis shell out 57 per cent of their national income in taxes. The figures do point up the fact that when it comes to taxation we're not as badly off as some folks.

A WORD EDGEWISE . . . By John P. Roche

Do you remember?

It seems as though everywhere you turn these days, you find economists and other pundits attending a wake for Lyndon Johnson's "Great Society." What a disaster it was! All that Medicare and Medicaid have led to are scandals; the rolls are loaded with "welfare chiselers" (usually personified with a certain rancid racism as blacks riding down to get their checks in Cadillacs); education has hardly improved despite the billions poured into it by that compulsive Texan; and because of the crazy expectations it generated, the disillusioned have turned to drugs and crime. The wise heads nod in cadence: It proved conclusively that you can't solve basic social problems by "throwing money at them."

Well, let's concede for starters that some of the rhetoric was overblown. Not because L.B.J. believed in instant solutions, but because he knew that you never get money from Congress by coming on timidly in the conditional tense. Admittedly some of the programs went astray, but again the Administration was venturing into uncharted waters, experimenting. Any scientists who achieve a batting average of .350 are candidates for Nobel Prizes, but the men and women who were grappling with poverty were somehow supposed to bat 1.000. Money was misused and wasted, but that was hardly novel: Congress had been pouring money down cherished rat holes such as agricultural price supports and "Rivers and Harbors" for generations.

In truth, what the critics object to are what were the Great Society's objectives, and I am prepared to submit that, taking into account legitimate criticism, these objectives were good and the programs in aggregated have transformed for the better many formerly squalid areas of American life. Nursing home scandals are much in the news. Allegedly various operators have bilked the public of millions by overcharging the government. But does anyone remember what it was like before public subsidization of nursing homes? At the risk of getting personal, I do. Does anyone recall what it was like when the sick and elderly poor had to be maintained by their families with whatever random assistance government provided? I do.

Back in that realistic era before Johnson came along and started "throwing federal money" at problems, my parents were elderly, sick and poor. In 1956 the firm my father worked for fired everybody (except, of course, the executives) over 65. Dad, at 69, was a dedicated worker with a high performance rating. The firm had no union, no pension system, and he lost his health insurance and the money he had for years contributed to a group life policy. He had no "equity" in it. Unknown was the fact that he was dying of cancer; known was that mother had suffered a stroke.

Gradually weakening from disease, he tried working on commission and lived on unemployment compensation (until it ran out) and social security. (Mother, who was 10 years younger, did not qualify for public assistance.) Fortunately, because of his record in World War I, he qualified for the only "socialized medicine" then in existence: a Veteran's Administration hospital and subsidized funeral. His last words to me were, "Johnnie, take care of your mother."

To make a tragic story short, and avoid overtones of self-pity, this was no simple task for my brother and me. We had young families and no trust funds, but we did our best. But mother had another stroke, expensive hospitalization (no insurance) and ended up in a nursing home. (By now she was old enough for social security, and I spent a busy week trying to prove she had been born: Brooklyn had no birth certificates until it became part of New York in 1898. Fortunately my PhD training served me in good stead, and an affidavit from her father, aged 90, helped.)

The nursing home was clean, well-run and expensive, that is, in terms of the money available. All medication, of course, was extra, and she had to take a number of costly drugs. (The items that used to get on my nerves when the bill came in were: "120 aspirin - $6; 6 doses milk of magnesia - $1.50; the only thing they didn't itemize was the water.) However, we were fortunate enough to get her admitted to a special facility for the aged and infirm established by the state of Massachusetts in a former Army general hospital. There she spent the short remnant of her life.

We were, in fact, extraordinarily lucky: The Veteran's Administration and the Massachusetts institution were like gifts from God. Few people similarly situated were saved from virtual bankruptcy. But then those were the "good old days" before the follies of the Great Society.

The hardest blowing, most voracious fire-eater is said to be Kjell Swing (Sweden), who can produce a flame 6½ feet long.

Illegal liquor sales under fire

By PERRY SMITH
Associated Press Writer
COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Not all booze sold in Ohio is sold legally, and the people who own the legitimate spots are asking for a crackdown.

The Ohio Licensed Beverage Association said its members pay the taxes, the license fees and lives with tough enforcement.

Bottle club operations don't have to bother with any of that, said Harold Rickert, executive secretary of the OLBA.

The association asked Ohio Department of Liquor Control Director Clifford E. Reich to stop illegal sales of alcoholic beverages.

After-hours joints flourish in the state's big cities, he said, and bottle clubs operate in relative security in other areas, particularly in southeastern counties.

"Local law enforcement has allowed these illegal establishments to operate with impunity," the OLBA said in a recent resolution.

Bring, your-bottle clubs operate at dance halls and even in some churches, Rickert claimed.

"It is unfair competition to the retail liquor industry," he said.

He called the retail liquor industry the most taxed and highly-regulated industry in the state.

The OLBA wants Gov. James A. Rhodes to call a grand jury to look into the problem. If it doesn't get help from the state, Rickert said the U.S. attorney's office would be asked to help.

Chan Cochran, administrative assistant to Rhodes, said the governor's office hasn't gotten involved in the issue. He said Reich was handling the complaint.

"There is no reason that it can't be handled there," he said. "It appears to be a matter of enforcement."

Reich has said his department will keep an eye on the situation, but he thinks the association should take any evidence it has to local prosecutors.

"If the problem is of the magnitude the association claims," he said, "I'm sure county prosecutors would come to us."

The association has said it will ask the Ohio General Assembly for a law requiring bring-your-own-bottle clubs to have a liquor license.

Stomach said top cut issue

WILMINGTON, Ohio (AP) — "The stomach is the gut issue of economic history," said Martin Giesbrecht, professor of economics at Wilmington College.

His students will begin daily sampling of the past as part of his course. It includes depression-type "crisis" dinners, "Poor Soup," developed by early Dutch settlers and Hawaiian dishes.

Dear Abby:

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Suggested: Swap Shop for spouses

DEAR ABBY: You could perform an even greater service than you do with your advice column if you were to set up a "Dear Abby Swap Shop."

The Dear Abby Swap Shop, which could be called "DASS," could arrange swaps between mates. For example, the wife of Gutless in New York, who complained because she was still a virgin after a year of marriage, could swap mates with one of those gals who is always complaining because her husband won't leave her alone long enough to get her housework done.

And that poor 44-year-old wife who is dead tired from working a 10-hour shift in a laundry could swap her Louie, who acts like he's still a teenager, for a man like "Enough is Enough," who's all burned out at the age of 50.

There are lots of couples who need swap mates, and you and DASS could do it, Abby. What do you say?

ORIGINATOR OF DASS

DEAR ORIGINATOR: Thanks a lot, but there's enough swapping going on without my starting a swap shop. In other words, "DASS" is nicht fur mich.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 64-year-old woman who has been going with a wonderful 69-year-old gentleman. He says he loves me, needs me, and wants to marry me.

I care for him so much, but here is my problem. When we first met, I told him I had been widowed once and divorced once, as I had no intentions of getting involved with him, but here is the story of my life.

When I was 17, I had a baby boy out of wedlock whom my mother kept until I married the following year. I had another child by this husband, and was divorced four years later.

I was married a second time and was divorced eight years later. No children. I married a third time and had two sons. That marriage lasted 22 years. My husband deserted me. After that I couldn't go out with another man until I met the one I am going with now.

He is pressing me for an answer and I don't know how much of my past I should tell him.

Although I was married and divorced three times I was never untrue to any of my husbands. This man says he hates a liar, so I'm afraid I'll lose him if he finds me to be one. Help me.

D. IN PHILADELPHIA

DEAR D.: There is no substitute for honesty. Tell him of your past marriages and divorces, but don't go into the details. Explain that had you known that your relationship would develop into a serious one, you'd have been more factual, but you were reluctant to tell a comparative stranger that you were a three-time loser. He'll understand.

DEAR ABBY: I am 18, and the youngest of all the women in our family. I am also the only unmarried woman in the family and I intend to stay that way. Do you want to know why?

Because all my sisters' husbands do is insult them. I never heard one of those husbands compliment his wife on anything. Just insults is all I hear. So what I want to know is, why are men always insulting their wives?

STAYING SINGLE

DEAR STAYING: Don't judge all men by your sisters' husbands. Either they're all losers, or your sisters don't deserve any compliments. Familiarity doesn't always breed contempt.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "RUNNING OUT OF GAS IN OHIO": One who keeps putting off learning how to drive for one reason or another should not be forced to learn. Perhaps his coordination is poor. Or he may lack self-confidence. In any case, he would be a poor driver and therefore a hazard on the road. Do him, yourself and society a favor, and get off his back.

Americans trying too much?

NEW YORK (AP) — In the opinion of Henry Ford II, Americans bit off more than they could chew, "unrealistically set out to do too much, too fast," but now can proceed to tackle their problems with great resources and "a little humility."

"What's right about America is that although we have a mess of problems, we have great capacity — intellect and resources — to do something about them," the chairman of the nation's third largest industrial company said.

In the midst of economic travails this country hasn't experienced since the 1930s, symbolized by acres of new but unsold cars and soaring unemployment in the automotive industry, Ford was asked for a statement on what remains right with the country.

The intellectual, spiritual and physical resources to deal with problems still exist in the American character, Ford indicated. But he added that we must avoid impossible attempts to resolve all the world's conflicts.

"The fact that we do have an enormous capability with which to deal with our problems is a great blessing," said Ford. "It may even be a mixed blessing."

Americans, he said "have been accustomed to jumping to the conclusions that just about anything can be accomplished. I think we've gone overboard in that direction."

As America emerged from World War II, he said, "we thought for a long time we could prevent aggression, stimulate economic growth and build democracy throughout the world."

"And in our own country, we set out to eliminate racial prejudice, rebuild cities, provide decent housing for everyone, and at the same time send men to the moon."

"Except for the moon exploration, none of these goals has been fully achieved. I believe a large part of the reason for the shortfall is that we unrealistically set out to do too much, too fast."

Ironically, that same comment has been made about the U.S. automotive industry, which has been the epitome of mass production, intensive selling, shrewd marketing and the stimulation of demand through polished promotion.

Partly because of this effort, the automobile came to symbolize the upward mobility of Americans. A car became the manifestation of individual taste and economic status. Sometimes it took two or more cars to press home the point.

"We," said Ford, speaking of Americans in general, "failed to comprehend the dimensions of the problems and as a result we didn't notice all the obstacles in the way."

But immediately he added to his statement: "We should not feel ashamed or defeated because we failed to accomplish the impossible."

Ford said "We have begun to realize that while we do have a great capacity to solve problems, we really do not have resources that can be wasted. We are beginning to realize that we can accomplish more at less cost and with less damage to national pride if we set out to right the wrongs of the world and our own with a little humility."

He continued: "One of the great resources that has pulled us through dark days before has been a sense of national unity. We need it desperately today; we need an infusion of political harmony...."

"This is a time to avoid recrimination and to repress the use of every platform for political gains. This is a time to work together and put our great problem-solving capacities in full gear. This is a time for confidence that these proven capacities once again will get the job done."

The weather in Ohio today was forecast to be somewhat similar to Sunday's weather, with snow flurries scattered over the state.

Expected snow amounts were light or traces, except for possible further accumulation in northeast Ohio off Lake Erie.

Afternoon readings were expected to be about 25 to 30 degrees, along with variable cloudiness and brisk northwesterly winds.

This was a contrast to conditions a year ago when the mercury soared to some recordbreaking 70s.

A high pressure area near Minnesota was forecast to reach the lower Ohio Valley Tuesday, bringing fair skies to Ohio.

Early morning temperatures Tuesday are expected to be in the teens and low 20s, rising to the upper 20s or mid 30s by afternoon.

A warming trend is expected to begin in midweek with temperatures above normal by Friday.

Temperatures Sunday night dropped to the low 20s and teens. Coldest spots in the state were Youngstown with 16 degrees and Mansfield with 15 degrees.

Fair with rising temperatures Wednesday through Friday. Highs in the 30s Wednesday, warming to upper 40s and low 50s Friday. Lows 15 to 20 early Wednesday and in upper 20s and low 30s early Friday.

Fair probe of agencies promised

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — There will be no "sacred cows" in the Senate's investigation of the nation's intelligence-gathering operations, according to Sen. Walter Huddleston, D-Ky.

Huddleston, a member of the committee conducting the investigation, said in Cincinnati Saturday that the panel will look into the total scope of domestic intelligence gathering.

"The committee is determined that it will not be a whitewash and that it will not be a witch hunt," said Huddleston, who was here to speak before an AFL-CIO conference on the economy.

The Kentucky senator said the primary question before making information public would be whether it would severely jeopardize the nation's security or future intelligence gathering.

Huddleston said he had no preconceived notion of what the committee would uncover, but said:

"There is no question there is a lack of congressional oversight of the agencies — oversight that could have prevented much of the alleged abuses."

Contradictions fill nation's economy

NEW YORK (AP) — President Ford's order releasing as much as $2 billion in highway funds is open to criticism that it is an expedient rather than a plan, and contradictory one at that.

But this is an economy of contradictions.

While urging the nation to cut back on its consumption of energy, Ford is in effect seeing to it that the use of energy is encouraged by building the roads over which the energyburners operate.

Most people can list a halfdozen socially desirable projects, beginning with mass transit projects that actually would save energy, that could benefit from a similar infusion of funds.

But while oil and other commodities might be in short supply, criticism isn't. Leadership throughout the world is faced today with such a complex of circumstances that nothing seems to satisfy, or even seem logical.

Perhaps the most baffling conflict is the concurrent rise in nationalism and the growing interdependence of the nations.

The Arabs, for example, can sell all the oil they can drain from the sands but it won't do them much good if Western industrial nations don't buy it, because then the Arabs couldn't buy Western technology.

Another head-on conflict exists between the rise in consumer expectations throughout the world and the need for energy to turn those expectations into reality. And that reality, in turn, often conflicts with the environment.

There is no end to the list. Even the battle against inflation poses the threat of more recession, and vice versa. The strange times lead to a federal budget deficit in the scores of billions being called conservative.

The entire economic climate is in such a state of change that philosophical ideals clash with what is practiced.

Big business fights for its independence from Washington and then, when in trouble, seeks special treatment there. Government regulatory agencies set up to promote fairness and efficiency are accused of being unjust and wasteful.

The climate being what it is, the President's highway building plan doesn't seem out of place. The entire picture must be kept in mind, and not the individual pieces that make up the picture.

But in an economic world in turmoil, that bigger picture is more and more perplexing.

Queen Elizabeth ends journey

LONDON (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II, looking fit and fresh after a night-long flight from Bermuda, arrived home to a wet and chilly London after a tour of Mexico and the Caribbean.

"We shall always remember the last six days of happiness and with deep gratitude for the warm and stirring welcome given to us," she said in a message to Mexico's president.

Recession cuts into real income

NEW YORK (AP) — The distinguishing characteristic of the present recession is that real incomes of workers have declined. In no other recession since World War II has this been so.

Analyzing the phenomenon, Argus Research Corp. observes that consumer expenditures for goods and services account for about two-thirds of the Gross National Product.

Thus, concludes Argus, which supplies much of Wall Street's research, "any sustained turnaround in the economy will require an upturn in real consumer spending power."

That's the problem, and it is fairly safe to say that everyone from the National Association of Manufacturers to the AFLCIO would agree that the country has to get money into the hands of its people.

Without it, retail sales dry up, bill payments lag, stocks sag. Even money lenders can't do as much business as they want.

Consumer installment credit has taken a nosedive over recent weeks, falling about $1.2 billion, with $814 billion of that occurring in December.

The proposed income tax rebates are designed to get purchasing power into the hands of distressed consumers. But there are indications the consumers won't use it for new purchases.

A survey by the First National City Bank suggests most people will put the rebate into savings or use it to pay bills. In fact, only 6.7 per cent said they would commit the money to everyday living expenses.

Only 30 per cent of the money, the survey indicated, would go directly back into the economy in the form of investments or would be spent for home improvements, automobile purchases, vacations and the like.

Does this mean that the money will therefore be kept from circulation? No.

When money is saved in a bank, credit union, or savings and loan association it generally is lent out by them to people who do want to spend. Thus the money remains in circulation.

Gas may be freed for fertilizer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Ford administration plans to ask Congress soon for emergency legislation aimed at boosting the production of nitrogen fertilizer needed by farmers, hopefully in time for 1975 crops required to rebuild the nation's sorely pressed food supply.

Although details are still being drafted in the Agriculture Department, the plan will call for removal of federal price regulation on sales of natural gas used to make fertilizer. In that way, a plant could bid whatever price it wanted to obtain gas and not be subject to cutbacks or price-fixing by the government.

The Federal Power Commission—FPC—now controls prices of natural gas sold across state lines and sets priorities to allocate supplies among users. Less than three per cent of the nation's natural gas output is used to make nitrogen fertilizer.

But the gas is the main source for the manufacture of ammonia, which in turn is processed into nitrogen compounds used by farmers to boost yields of wheat, corn and other major crops.

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., has prepared an amendment to an earlier bill he introduced which also would provide special deregulation of natural gas for fertilizer purposes for one year. Aides said Dole's proposal also is expected to be introduced shortly.

According to fertilizer industry sources, the supply of anhydrous ammonia—a basic nitrogen compound—will fall nearly 12 per cent short of meeting demands for 1975 crops if farmers go all-out with spring planting as USDA has predicted.

Perhaps one-fourth of the nitrogen shortage will be due to cutbacks in natural gas available to fertilizer plants under the present priority system, according to the industry's Fertilizer Institute.

At USDA, officials do not go along entirely with the industry's shortage predictions but admit the supply situation will be as tight—and perhaps more so—than it was last year.

J. Dawson Ahalt, a staff economist at USDA, says nitrogen fertilizer shortages already have been severe in parts of the country, particularly in the Southeast. He said the priority system used by the FPC so far has not recognized fully the critical need for allocating more natural gas to fertilizer.

If Congress approves the department's plan to deregulate gas prices, Ahalt said, the present priority system designed to accommodate users generally would be circumvented and enable fertilizer manufacturers to bid as large a price as they choose for what they need.

Prenatal care classes slated at hospital

The third series of pre-natal classes at Fayette Memorial Hospital are scheduled to begin Tuesday, March 4, and continue weekly through April 8, according to Mrs. Mary Rowland and obstetrics supervisor at the hospital.

These classes, planned and taught by a committee of local physicians, hospital staff, County Health Department nurses and County Home Economics agent are designed to prepare parents for their first childbirth experience.

The classes will be conducted every Tuesday evening from 7:30 to 9 p.m. at the hospital. A $5.00 donation is suggested per couple to help with cost of resources.

This first session taught by Mrs. Rowland and Dr. K.K. Wong will introduce couples to the series and outline fetal growth and development.

The remaining classes will cover "Life During Pregnancy," "Preparation for the Hospital Trip," "Labor, Delivery, and Anesthesia," and "Baby Care and Care for the New Mother." Four of the classes will include instruction on breathing and relaxation exercises. A husband or friend is urged to attend class along with the expectant mother.

'Potpourri' club topic

The Town and Country Garden Club met with Mrs. John Frost for the February meeting. One guest, Mrs. Hugh LaFollette, and 17 members were present.

Mrs. Dwight Duff, president, opened the meeting by reading an article concerning "Money." Announcement was made of an open meeting of the Washington garden Club May 7 at the Fish and Game Lodge, an open meeting of Posa Garden Club June 11 in the Madison Mills Methodist Church, and an open meeting of the Fayette Garden Club June 13 in First Presbyterian Church in Washington C.H.

Plans were also made for a spring tour March 13. Members and guests will meet at the home of Mrs. Richard Rankin at 9:30 a.m. and tour to Columbus to the Ohio Historical Society Museum and the Ohio Village, also have a stop at the French Market.

Mrs. Lee Cleland gave a very interesting and informative program on "Potpourri." Perfumes are made up of hundred of ingredients which are grouped as main scents, blenders and fixatives. Roses which are to be dried should be gathered at their peak of bloom, early of a morning on a dry day. Petals are separated and placed on a screen away from strong light and in an airy dry place. Leaves can also be added for fragrance. Allow four to six days to dry before placing in covered jars along with a few drops of oil and spices.

The next meeting will be held at Anderson's Restaurant with Mrs. Gerald Stephenson and Mrs. David Krupla as hostesses. Jerry Creameans will show a film.

Mrs. John Frost was assisted in serving refreshments by Mrs. Eli Craig.

Rotary Ann party visits Europe

The Washington Rotary Club returned Sunday from a tour of Europe, at least in spirit.

During the club's Rotary Ann party Saturday night, Rotarians and their wives were treated to the fine wines of the United States and Europe and enjoyed the "flavor" of France, Germany and Italy. The "Evening of Romance" concluded with dessert and dancing in Rome.

Upon entering, each member received a passport which suggested that the holder begin the evening with cocktails in Paris. It included a description of the cheeses which would highlight the various wines available.

German foods were supplied to compliment the German wines and draught beer. Singing was encouraged as an aide to digestion which is practiced almost religiously by all of Germany.

Dessert wines were available as well as pastry and coffee when the festivities came to a close in Rome. Dancing was a highlight of the stop in Rome.

The better part of Europe had been incorporated into the Mahan Building for the night.

Perhaps it would have been better to say that Europe has just returned from a visit to Washington C.H. At any rate, it proved most enjoyable to the Rotarians and wives attending.

In addition to local club members, those attending included District 667 Governor Jim Valentine and his wife of Vandalia.

Each lady attending received Estee spray cologne, and several door prizes were awarded throughout the evening.

Attending were Mr. and Mrs. Paul Crosby, Mr. and Mrs. John Bath, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Free, Mr. and Mrs. William Black, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Cooper, Mr. and Mrs. David Cooper, Dr. and Mrs. Robert Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Wright;

Local square dance draws members from many clubs

The American Legion Hall was the scene of a dance Friday sponsored by The Shooting Stars Western Square Dance Club, of Washington C. H.

This dance was attended not only by square dance clubs in the surrounding area but also from Englewood, Piketon and Seaman. Eight clubs were represented and twenty nine couples enjoyed the evening dancing to the calling of Curly Roe. Roe, a local businessman, is a caller and instructor for the Curli-Ques Club in Seman, Ohio.

In the absence of the club president, Richard Coates spoke on behalf of the members and expressed appreciation for the excellent attendance and a special thanks to the couples who put forth extra effort by coming great distances.

He also said that it is the hope of the club to plan and host more such dances in the future as it gives new clubs the opportunity to meet couples from other clubs. It also helps promote Western Square Dancing as a "fun" hobby and pastime not only for adults but also for young people.

The planning committee for the evening's activities was Mr. and Mrs. Gene Pfaff, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Hagler and Mr. and Mrs. Coates.

Guests and the clubs they represented were Mrs. Curly Roe, Mr. and Mrs. Bev Lininger, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Blade, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Grooms, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Kautz, Mr. and Mrs. John Beasley, Mr. and Mrs. David Scott of the Curli-Ques of Seaman; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Young and Mr. and Mrs. Homer Wolford of the Belles & Beaus of Chillicothe.

Spring Suitables

Jackets Top Off Crisp Skirt and Dress Costumes

By JOAN O'SULLIVAN
WOMEN want to get back into skirts, says Dattilo, the young west coast designer who's making a name for himself. That's why he's doing more skirt suits and dress suits than tailored pantsuits. "Women like a little jacket to wear with skirts and dresses," he says, and that's what he gives them. As often as not, the jacket can be worn with other skirts, dresses or even pants.

"To fight inflation," says Dattilo, "women must learn not to buy new clothes from head to foot each season. Instead, they should add parts that give last season's clothes the look of today."

BOX jacket tops jumper that can be worn with shirt, as shown, or without. Suit is straw-colored silk.

BLACK and white windowpane checks make crisp blazer and A-line skirt. Note the king size lapels.

Economic picture slightly better

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Money is flowing back to the savings and loan associations, mutual fund sales are up, so is the stock market. Interest rates, meanwhile, are falling and, almost unbelievably, so are some prices.
Does it mean the economic picture is brightening? Well, yes and no. There's little question that some of the most dismal aspects of the picture aren't as dark as a year ago. But other parts are darker.

Retail sales still haven't shown a tendency to recover. Unemployment is still growing worse. Action to stimulate the economy lags. The dollar continues to fall in value, relative to the currencies of many nations.

If you tune in to the findings of the surveys of consumer confidence you will hear reports of spirits being at their lowest ebb in decades, of growing cynicism about the ability of leadership, suspicion that institutions designed to serve the people are failing to do so.

The Federal Reserve Board, especially, is under attack because, despite its avowed intentions, it seems to have been unable to increase the money supply at a rate adequate for the pace of the economy.
But there are, it cannot be denied, some improvements beginning to show in the economy.

The rate of inflation is lessening, and for many people that's 50 per cent of the economic problem, the other 50 per cent being joblessness.

The housing picture has turned decidedly brighter — still tinged with gray, but healthier than just a few months ago, mainly because interest rates are falling.

When that happens, money reflows to savings and loan associations, which had been almost forced out of business because they couldn't offer interest on savings comparable with other institutions.

When money reflows to the S&Ls it almost certainly means a recovery in housing is only months away. Those signs are mixed at the moment, but by summer the pace of activity is bound to pick up, simply because lenders once again will be able to make loans.

Perhaps the most exuberant response to the slight changes has come from the securities markets. Almost overnight mutual funds have regained their sales momentum; sales have greatly exceeded redemptions.

Many stock market investors are convinced that now is the time to obtain buys of a lifetime. Blue-chip stocks still sell at low price-earnings ratios, despite the surge of the past few weeks.

Some of this enthusiasm is spread from Europe, where the economic decline seems to have hit sooner than in the United States and already to have reached bottom.

But there still is no energy program or final tax-rebate program, and while almost anyone you might stop on the street would agree that a sound recovery can't proceed without them, the agreement doesn't seem to lead to decision.

Financial difficulties outlined in Dayton, Power & Light report

DAYTON — Soaring costs coupled with problems of financing construction of new facilities to meet growing customer demands for electricity have been outlined in the 1974 annual report issued by the Dayton Power and Light Co.

"While most other businesses have the option of postponing capital expansion during periods of inflation and high interest rates, DP&L must continue its construction program if its customers' growing requirements are to be met," DP&L chairman Robert B. Killen said to shareholders.

Revenues for 1974 were $299.95 million up 31 per cent from $229.38 million for 1973. Earnings for 1974 were $23.8 million, an increase of seven per cent over the previous year. Dividends on common stock paid during the year amounted to $20.7 million, leaving only about $3 million of retained earnings to invest in the $92.2 million construction program. This required the company to raise $88.1 million from investors under very adverse money market conditions, Killen said.

Earnings per share were diluted by the sale, last August, of 1.7 million additional shares of common stock. As a result, per share earnings increased only two cents, to $1.89. In 1972, earnings per share were $2.15. Common stock dividends remained stationary at $1.66 per share.

In 1974, DP&L reduced its construction by $15 million, and this year it has been reduced by $45.3 million. This was due to revised projections of electric demand and because of the difficulties of financing. However, Killen warned that a serious delay in DP&L's construction program could result in a future shortage of electricity, similar to that which now exists for natural gas.

Killen said the government can help by keeping rates abreast with costs, and can help ease the burden on consumers of higher rates in the future. He advocated reduction in corporate income tax rate, an increase in investment tax credit and tax exemption for dividends paid to stockholders.

Measures taken by DP&L to reduce costs and improve efficiency continued through 1974. DP&L's total work force has been reduced by about seven per cent.

Free electricity gone with wind

NEW VIENNA, Ohio (AP) — Last month the Oscar Johnsons paid more for their electricity than they paid during the entire 10-year period from 1937-1947.

After an initial investment of $69.95 for a windcharger in 1937, the Johnsons' electricity was free as the wind. Last month they paid $82.

In 1936 the Johnsons replaced their gasoline generator with a 32-volt windcharger. It consisted of a generator, a 10-foot airplane-type propeller and a governor to maintain proper speed even in the strongest wind.

The charger weighed 170 pounds and generated 650 watts of electricity, which was stored in glass storage batteries.

"It was something new in this part of the country," said Mrs. Elizabeth Johnson. "Although many told us it wouldn't work we were determined to try it anyway."

"We had a 45-foot windmill tower in our yard, and we mounted it on top of this tower. It would generate in any breeze of seven miles or more."

"I always picked a windy day to wash and iron as those motors required a lot of power."

In those days, Mrs. Johnson recalled, all light bulbs, small motors and household appliances could be bought in either 32 or 110 volts. The windcharger furnished enough power to operate the washer, iron, sweeper, radio lights and various small electric motors in Oscar Johnson's home workshop.

"In 1947 the war was over and the power company could get the wire to build us a line back our long lane, so we changed over," said Mrs. Johnson. "By this time they no longer manufactured 32-volt things." "The windcharger still stands atop its tower in our backyard to remind us of the good old days when our electricity was free as the wind."

Teamsters chief backs president

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — Teamster President Frank Fitzsimmons has given President Gerald Ford a vote of confidence, but believes the President's economic advisors "leave something to be desired."

Fitzsimmons, speaking at a news conference here Saturday, said he forsores controls on all segments of the economy, not just wages and prices.

"I feel like a voice in the wilderness," Fitzsimmons said. "But the public has lost faith in the government and something must be done to bring back that faith. And that something must be controls."

Fitzsimmons, who is seeking reelection as head of the 2.5 million-member union, launched a fullscale attack on James Hoffa. Hoffa has talked about making a comeback as Teamsters president.

Fitzsimmons said, "Hoffa is a bum, a has-been. He's soft in the head. He's a liar and a stool pigeon. He doesn't pose any threat to the Teamsters or any other labor organization."

Last week, Hoffa, who was president of the union before going to jail for jury tampering in 1967, said the union was being run by "people more interested in playing golf than they are in the membership."

Hoffa is currently appealing a condition attached to the commutation of his federal prison sentence barring him from union activities until 1980.

Automated feeding of cows developed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scientists are working on an electronic system which will automatically dispense the proper amount of feed to a cow when the animal presents a "credit card" entitling her to a meal.

The Agriculture Department says the device, still in the experimental state, would conserve feed by dispensing larger meals to cows which produce the most milk and smaller portions to those which give less.

Dairy farmers already know that high-producing cows need more feed and use a variety of methods to parcel out rations. Some farmers feed their cows in groups according to milk output and others parcel out feed to individual cows while they are being milked.

The electronic system was described in the current issue of "Agricultural Research" published by USDA over the weekend. It involves work being done by the department's Agricultural Research Service in cooperation with the Illinois Experiment Station, Urbana, Ill.

Engineers working on the project said the system "liberates each cow from the hassle of struggling for her share of grain at a community trough or during milking time" by allowing her to eat leisurely according to her needs.

"She wears an electronic device called a transponder that fits on a neck collar," the report said. "The transponder, which serves as a kind of credit card, activates a feed dispenser when the cow sticks her head into a feed trough."

The transponders are coded electronically to identify each cow and how much feed she gets. The feed is dispensed slowly and stops when a memory bank in the device signals that the cow has had enough.

As part of the project, the scientists also are studying the social behavior of cows which use the electronic feeding system to see if they might be coaxed into eating faster and not to dawdle so much.

"Presently, the researchers know that feed ingestion rates are affected by the shape of the feed bowl and the feed's moisture content and texture," the report said. "Dawdling time depends upon such conditions as the cow's place in the bovine pecking order, comfort of the stall and the weather outside of the stall."

South Vietnam may survive without aid

By GEORGE ESPER
Associated Press Writer
SAIGON (AP) — South Vietnam can survive without supplemental military aid from the United States, but its ammunition stocks would fall to a dangerously low level by June if fighting gets worse, according to Western political and military analysts here.

At the same time, they said, North Vietnam and the Viet Cong have enough stockpiles on hand to sustain an offensive for more than a year.

These sources say that two-thirds of the $300 million in supplemental aid requested from Congress by President Ford for South Vietnam would go for ammunition and fuel, the rest for an assortment of items such as spare parts, communications equipment and medical supplies.

"I don't think the country will collapse if they don't get the supplemental aid," one of these sources said, "but their ammunition stocks would fall to a dangerously low level by June if there is a high level of fighting in the next few months."

The $700 million Congress approved for South Vietnam for the fiscal year that began last July 1 will run out by June 30. In his budget for the fiscal year 1976 beginning next July 1, Ford is seeking $975 million for South Vietnam.

While some congressional leaders say it is doubtful that the supplemental aid will be approved, analysts say it is unlikely that all aid would be terminated. Even if it were, South Vietnam has some limited financial resources, reportedly up to $300 million, including dollar and gold reserves.

If the supplemental aid is rejected, analysts say, South Vietnam would simply have to get by until July 1 when it could start drawing funds for the new fiscal year.

Western diplomats say that since the signing of the ceasefire agreement in January 1973, the United States has not replaced equipment for the South Vietnamese on a one-to-one basis as allowed under terms of the accords, with international supervision.

Except for about 30 advanced F5E jet fighter-bombers and some vehicles, the United States has not purchased or replaced heavy war equipment such as tanks and artillery since the signing of the agreement, diplomats say.

But it is known that a few months before the signing — when it became evident that an agreement was near — the United States rushed in hundreds of tons of equipment, including aircraft and tanks, in an effort to beef up the South Vietnamese.

Western sources say that since the cease-fire North Vietnam has heavily beefed up its forces while South Vietnamese forces have declined, although they still outnumber the North in manpower and equipment.

The South Vietnamese have lost more than 30,000 soldiers killed and the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese about an equal number since the ceasefire pact, according to the Saigon government.

According to U.S. sources, South Vietnam still has a 2-1 advantage in military manpower, 3-1 in artillery and an air superiority, but "the military balance is shifting toward North Vietnam."

Western diplomats say North Vietnamese stockpiles in the South "are now estimated to be sufficient to sustain a military offensive of the 1972 campaign's intensity for well over a year. Additional large stockpiles situated in extreme southern North Vietnam are available for rapid transfer ... South."

President Nguyen Van Thieu maintains that the reduction in U.S. military aid, from a requested $1.4 billion for the current fiscal year to $700 million, had reduced the combat efficiency of the South Vietnamese armed forces by 60 per cent.

The North Vietnamese have won back virtually all of the territory once held by U.S. forces, much of it during the big 1972 Easter offensive, including large chunks of Quang Tri Province in the far northern sector of South Vietnam.

"The Communist side probably controls as much land as the government," says one analyst. But, he claims, the government controls 90 per cent or more of South Vietnam's 20 million population.

Analysts do not anticipate a nationwide general offensive by the North Vietnamese to seek a military victory but they predict they will keep up pressure.

"They don't feel they really need a military victory," one said. "They are uncertain how the U.S. reaction would be to an across-the-border invasion. It's easier to keep a low profile, not attract as much attention. It might take longer but it is much safer and more economical to keep the pressure on in hopes of collapsing the government on its own weaknesses and forcing Thieu to resign."

THE FAMILY PLACE TO SAVE

MONTGOMERY WARD

Two Milledgeville council members resign from posts

MILLEDGEVILLE — Councilmen Larry Anderson and Felix Stevens resigned their posts Saturday when the Milledgeville Council convened for its monthly meeting. Mike Crowe was appointed to fill one of the vacancies, but the other remains. Both resignations were attributed to personal responsibilities.

Mayor Ronnie Anderson said there are no immediate prospects for filling the other council seat, and anyone who is interested in serving the village government should call the mayor.

Council members discussed the mounting number of complaints from village residents concerning unleashed dogs. They resolved to ask the county dog warden to pick up the dogs unless the situation is remedied immediately.

Council announced that four or five catch basins which are in need or extensive repair will be attended during the next month. Two street lights will also be replaced.

It was noted at the meeting adjourned that the suit filed by the village against L. J. Dill, owner of the abandoned elevator, has been rescheduled for hearing in Washington C. H. Municipal Court at 2:30 p.m. March 18.

The village has attempted to have the elevator site cleared since shortly after the structure was destroyed by fire several years ago.

Four weekend fires checked

Washington C. H. firemen were alerted to three fires Saturday afternoon and the Fayette County Sheriff's Department reported one fire in the county.

A fire broke out in the Dennis Stepter home at 615 E. Elm St., at 1:36 p.m. Saturday. Washington C. H. firemen reported Stepter had been smoking a cigarette in bed when he fell asleep and then awoke on a burning mattress.

Firemen took the mattress and box spring outside and then used a ventilating fan to clear the house of smoke. Stepter was not burned and damage in the house owned by A. J. Brown of 1224 Nelson Place, was limited to the bed.

A grass fire broke out in the vicinity of U.S. 35 and Upper Jamestown Road, in a field owned by Jack Fannin, at 2:45 p.m. Saturday Fayette County Sheriff's Deputy R. A. Russell, who was on the scene, reported people were burning weeds on the adjacent property and the fire spread to Fannin's land.

Jefferson Township firemen responded and subdued the blaze. They reported no damage because no crops had been planted.

A fire started at 2:53 p.m. Saturday at the John Dilley residence, 836 Maple St., when burning pieces of paper in an ashtray were emptied into a waste can. Washington C. H. firemen reported Mrs. Dilley saw the smoke, ran upstairs and tossed the burning can out a window. The can fell onto the garage roof below and firemen extinguished the small fire which started on the roof. They also ventilated the house of the smoke within.

A grass and weed fire started at 3:56 p.m. Saturday on U.S. 35, across from Water's Supply Co., while workers were cutting steel with a torch. Richard Waters told firemen he would see that his men put the fire out.

Graduation of paralyzed student near

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — Dean W. Baesel has been paralyzed from the waist down after being shot during a liquor store holdup. But the third-year dental student says he will graduate even if he has to "crawl through graduation."

Two masked men entered the liquor store where Baesel was working on Saturday and ordered him to lie on the floor. One of the men, armed with a handgun, straddled Baesel while the other emptied the cash register, according to Ronald Jackson, chief of detectives for suburban Overland Park.

Baesel was asked where the "other money" was kept, Jackson said. When he said there was no more money in the store, Jackson quoted the armed man as saying, "I thought I told you to lie down." Baesel said the armed man then shot him at close range between the shoulder blades.

Baesel, 24, is hospitalized in serious condition here, paralyzed from the waist down by the bullet that struck his fourth vertebra and chopped away two-thirds of his spinal cord.

"He told his wife, Betsy, he would have to postpone an early graduation" from the University of Missouri-Kansas City Dental School, said his father, Dean E. Baesel. "He said he would make it through dental school even if he had to crawl through graduation."

"The victim said he did exactly what he was told to do," Jackson said. "There was no reason for him to be shot. He couldn't even have identified them. Personally, I think they meant to kill him."

Baesel had worked at the store two days a week and alternated weekend duty with other employees to defray his school costs.

TALKING TO A GRADUATE — Amber Haines seems to be discussing the merits of sending mice to college with "Stanley," the American Cancer Society mouse. Amber and other elementary students are helping the society raise money for the purchase of mice used by cancer researchers on a number of American campuses. Amber, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Haines, Waverly Dr., is a student at Belle-Aire Elementary School. Todd and Kami Anderson, children of Mr. and Mrs. Billy Anderson, represent Eber and Chaffin schools respectively. In all, 16 area schools are participating. College costs are relatively inexpensive — while student educations range from $8,000 on up, mice can go for only 51 cents each.

'Mouse to College' project opens in Fayette schools

"Mouse to College," a special project sponsored by the Fayette County unit of the American Cancer Society, will be held today through March 14.

A total of 4,375 Fayette County students, 2,716 in the Miami Trace School District, and 1,659 in the Washington C.H. School District, are participating in the project which allows the school children to play an important role in the fund-raising project to help the American Cancer Society find a cure for cancer.

The administrations of both county school systems have given their approval for the "Mouse to College" activity to be conducted and it is the only project taken into the schools.

Students at Eber Junior High School and Chaffin, Jasper, Olive, Good Hope, Wilson, Staunton, Bloomingburg, Jeffersonville, New Holland and Madison Mills elementary schools are participating in the project along with students at the Washington C.H. Middle School, Belle-Aire, Eastside, Rose Avenue and Cherry Hill elementary schools.

Judge becomes newspaperboy

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — The residents of Summit Avenue not only have the governor for a neighbor, but they have the judge as their paperboy. Municipal Court Judge Roland Faricy, 40, began by helping his children — Chris, 14, and Beth, 12 — deliver the Minneapolis Tribune.

But about a year ago he got a route of his own because his doctor advised regular exercise for a heart condition. Faricy walks the four-mile route to deliver about 50 papers every morning.

He says it fulfills a youthful ambition and puts a restraint on excessive nighttime social activity.

Mrs. Wanda Taylor, project chairman, said all students are given a letter from "Stanley Mouse," and an envelope to take home for their parents to read. If the parents agree to let their child participate in the activity, by sending a mouse to college, they place 51 cents into the envelope, take it back to school to their teacher and then the teacher presents the student with a badge. The 51-cent donation purchases a mouse to be used in cancer research. This helps the child, at an early age, to learn about cancer without fears and anxieties, Mrs. Taylor said.

Pork recipe search opens

A $10,000 search for outstanding pork recipes is underway throughout the midwest.

The program is being conducted by Heindol Hog Markets during its 25th anniversary year. Each of the company's 63 markets in seven states is accepting entries in the contest which will award prizes totaling almost $10,000 to persons submitting recipes using pork that judges feel will help promote consumption of pork in the nation.

The contest was announced at the annual meeting of Heindol Hog Market managers in Kouts, Ind., Saturday, Feb. 15.

Among those attending the annual meeting was Lee Stewart, manager of the market at Clarksburg.

The Alaska Highway, stretching 1,520 miles from Dawson Creek, B.C. to Fairbanks, Alaska, was built as a war measure in only nine months and six days. The all-weather highway travels through the Yukon and some of the most picturesque scenery in the world.

U.S. pullout eyed by Thais

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Thailand's new government is going to call for the withdrawal of all American forces stationed in the country within 18 months unless a critical military situation exists then, Defense Minister Thawit Seniwig told newsmen today.

Gen. Thawit said this would be part of the policy statement the new prime minister, Seni Pramoj, makes to the House of Representatives on Thursday. His coalition government is expected to have an uncertain future because it does not command a majority in the house.

Thawit said the policy statement was first drafted to call for the American withdrawal "as soon as possible." He declined to say why it was changed.

He added that when the government enunciates the policy, "we will have to do it. And if we cannot accomplish it, we have to inform the House of Representatives then that we can't do it."

There are about 25,000 U.S. military personnel and 350 military aircraft stationed at air bases in Thailand, American military spokesmen say.

Arab investments said good thing

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The president of the American Jewish Congress says Arab investments in U.S. companies are good for the economy but steps should be taken to prevent boycotts and discrimination.

"Such investment is both inevitable and welcome as a stimulus to our economy," said Rabbi Arthur Hertzberg. "At the same time, however, Arab investment must not be permitted to distort the political institutions, business practices or foreign policy of our country."

Speaking Sunday to 400 delegates at the start of a three-day convention of the American Jewish Congress Women's Division, Rabbi Hertzberg suggested creation of a federal agency to compel disclosure of foreign investment in U.S. companies and to report on the extent of foreign ownership of American enterprise.

He also called for "a prohibition against the imposition of conditions by foreign investors that would require discriminatory practices in financial or business undertakings conducted by companies operating in America."

"At a time when economic problems due to the oil crisis, inflation and unemployment cause foreign investments in America to seem most attractive, it is necessary that conditions be established so that foreign investments will not be permitted to undermine the rights of its citizens."

Last week, a list was made public of 1,500 U.S. businesses and organizations boycotted by Saudi Arabia for having some connections with Israel. The concerns on the list, among them such major and diverse firms as Ford Motor Co., Coca Cola and RCA, were prohibited from doing business in Saudi Arabia.

President Ford responded to the publication of the list, which was apparently drafted in 1970, with a promise that "any allegations of discrimination will be fully investigated and appropriate action taken under the laws of the United States."

Rabbi Hertzberg said his organization is drafting legislation to help American companies resist an anti-Israel boycott by Arab nations.

The proposed legislation would make it illegal for any country doing business with the United States "to boycott or exclude from trade any foreign nation that maintains diplomatic relations with the United States."

State securities quietly moved

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Thirty men using three Brink's, Inc., trucks quietly moved nearly $9 billion in state securities from the Ohio Statehouse to vaults across the street in the new State Office Tower over the weekend.

Brink's officials said the operation, which took 20 hours to complete, was one of the biggest money moves in the national firm's history.

State Treasurer Gertrude Donahey, who had asked the news media not to publicize the transfer until after it was completed, said about 150 truckloads were required to move the securities to the new skyscraper.

Each vehicle was insured for $50 million for each trip.

Mrs. Donahey said only about $70,000 in cash was involved in the transfer. "We don't keep a lot of cash around," she said.

The securities, owned by the state retirement systems and other agencies, were moved from two underground vaults in the more than century-old Statehouse to two new ones in the $70 million office tower completed late last summer.

Although the new structure is just across Broad Street from the Capitol, the effort required a truck route of several blocks, due to one-way streets.

An underground tunnel connects the two buildings, but Brink's officials said the passageway was too small to accommodate the operation.

Cost of the move was estimated at about $20,000, which is being paid by the Ohio Building Authority, builder of the high rise tower.

At the same time the securities were moved, Mrs. Donahey completed the transfer of her office to the new building. She confessed the move saddened her.

"We have come a long way, this old building and I," she said.

"My roots in state government are long and deep; tradition and historical continuity mean a great deal to me," mused the widow of former Lt. Gov. John Donahey and daughter-in-law of one-time Gov. and U.S. Sen. Vic Donahey.

The first attempted English settlement of America was on what is now Roanoke Island, N.C., in 1585.

GLEN WHITTINGTON
Whittington named manager

Glen Whittington, 917 Clinton Ave., a field assistant at the Federal Land Bank Association in Washington C. H. for the past seven years, has been named manager of the Federal Land Bank Association office in Lebanon.

Whittington, who was named field assistant to manager Ronald D. Ratliff in 1968, replaces Ellis Sturn at the Lebanon office. Sturn retired as manager of the Lebanon office after a number of years of service.

The Federal Land Bank Association office in Lebanon serves the needs for long-term farm and rural loans in Warren, Clermont, Hamilton and Brown counties. The association has an outstanding loan volume of over $16 million and is a part of the Fourth Farm Credit district with the home office located in Louisville, Ky.

Born and raised on a farm in the Clinton-Greene county area, Whittington has been associated with farming all his life. His duties at the Federal Land Bank Association office here included appraisals, inspections and taking loan applications for Fayette, Madison and Clinton counties.

The Whittingtons will continue to reside in Washington C. H. until school is dismissed for the summer or until suitable housing is located in the Lebanon area. He and Mrs. Whittington, the former Nedra Harper, have five children, Barbara, a student at Washington Senior High School; Duane, a fourth grader at Cherry Hill Elementary School; Jodie, a student at Ohio State University; Linda, residing in Columbus, and Mrs. Tom (Deborah) Baltes of Dayton.

Mrs. Whittington has made draperies for the new Federal Land Bank building here along with several other offices and homes here and surrounding areas, and plans to continue after the family settles in Lebanon.

Blaze hits Terre Haute

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. (AP) — A geyser of flames from a broken gas main forced firemen to maintain an overnight vigil in the aftermath of a major fire that threatened the heart of the downtown business section here Sunday.

The four-inch main, located in the boiler room of a building gutted by Sunday's fire, sprayed torchlike flames from the basement to the second floor. But officials said there was no danger of an explosion.

Firemen said part of the building would have to be torn down before utility crews could safely plug the broken main.

An unidentified worker for Terre Haute Gas Corp. said crews would have to use hydraulic drills to dig through the street surface to reach the gas main. "The vibrations from the ground might send the wall right down on the men," he said.

Fireman Tom Champion said the back wall of the gutted building, already buckling under the force of the fire, probably would be pulled down by a wrecking company today so utility crews could move in.

The general cost rule of thumb to follow when buying a large boat is about $1,000 a foot. This rule is inapplicable for yachts more than 50 feet long, since a great deal of their cost is for luxurious appointments and diesel power.

Dean defends lecture fees

ATHENS, Ohio (AP) — Former White House counsel John Dean said here Sunday night he felt it was wrong for Watergate figures to make excessive profits from their involvement in the scandal.

But Dean, who received $2,760 for a two-hour appearance at Ohio University, indicated he did not think the fees he received were excessive. "I can't afford to come for free," he told an audience of about 6,000. "I've got debts to pay. If I could speak for free I would."

Dean said he could make much more money by writing about Watergate, having been offered up to $100 a word for articles, but would rather speak and make personal appearances. The fees make the speeches possible, he added.

Dean was commenting on a growing controversy about the fees Watergate conspirators have been receiving for speeches. While he spoke, about 50 protestors picketed outside the convocation center.

At Miami University of Ohio, where Dean was scheduled to speak tonight, a group calling itself the "Boycott Dean Committee," planned a vigil outside Millet Hall to protest the $4,000 fee Dean has been guaranteed.

Tickets for the Miami appearance are $1 apiece, while admission was free at Ohio University.

More than 2,000 advance tickets have been sold for the Miami appearance, and the organizer, the Campus Activities Council, said no funds will be taken from student general fee money, but any loss will be made up by profits from other council events.

Dean, who served four months of a one-to-four year prison sentence for his part in the Watergate affair, told the Ohio University audience the scandal was a "sad chapter" in American history.

He said Watergate was an example of "the corrupt use of power by government officials for political purposes."

He said he hoped Watergate would not disenchant people from taking part in politics.

And he added that he hoped it would cause people to examine candidates more closely and perhaps run for office themselves.

Wolf kill plan stirs controversy

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — A state-sponsored wolf kill is a sensitive topic for Alaska's conservationist governor, Jay Hammond, a former flying exterminator who hung up his guns years ago.

The wolf, an endangered species in some parts of the United States, appears to be thriving in Alaska, but a plan to shoot 100 or more of them to protect a moose herd near Fairbanks has generated a court suit and bitter reaction from environmentalists.

A Superior Court judge was expected to rule this week on whether to stop the airplane hunts.

Hammond says he has received "multitudes of letters" from throughout the nation protesting the hunt.

"I hesitate to even talk on this matter," Hammond says, "because it brings all the experts out of the woodwork shrieking their particular position ... The truth of the matter is just somewhere in between."

As a predator control officer for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in the 1950s, Hammond flew and fired on aerial hunts which took more than 250 wolves in seven years.

"There are probably as many wolves in Alaska now as there have been in the last fifty years," says state game biologist Bob Hinman. He estimates the number at between 8,000 and 10,000.

Hammond, as a state legislator, was instrumental in curbing the use of poison and bounties to eliminate wolves preying on moose, caribou and other game animals.

"Many people who ardently supported me on the presumption that I would never permit a wolf to be killed in Alaska have peeled off," he said.

He said he refused to intervene in the predator-control program because "you're either going to have professional management or you're going to have political ... I'll opt for professional management anytime."

Biologists do not blame wolves alone for cutting drastically into the moose population of a popular hunting area on the Tanana Flats near Fairbanks. Extreme winters and hunting pressure also contribute to a decline from 12,000 moose to 3,600 in about 10 years.

Hinman said the herd "has decreased to the point where it can no longer sustain both wolf predation and human hunting. He said human hunting would be reduced or stopped.

Hunting by air is the most humane means of killing, Hinman said.

Curtain falls on Lions

By PHIL LEWIS
Record-Herald Sports Editor
The curtain fell on the Washington C.H. Blue Lions' basketball season Saturday night before a capacity crowd at Unioto High School as the Lions dropped the final game of the class AA sectional.

Conference foe Greenfield McClain played the part of the curtain in defeating the Blue Lions, 62-54, with a fine defense and some remarkable shooting.

Down by as many as 17 points in the second half, Washington fought its way back to pull within four points in the final period. The Lions trailed, 52-48, shooting the bonus on a three point play with little over three minutes left in the game. The foul shot was off and the Lions missed three tip-in chances that would have narrowed the gap to a single basket. Greenfield scored the next eight points to finish the Blue Lions' tournament hopes.

It was Greenfield's third season victory over Washington in three tries and the Tigers knew who to stop, flashy guard Chuck Byrd. Greenfield's man-to-man defense put the clamps on the high scoring Byrd, holding him to a single point in the first half.

The Tiger's defense tightened up the middle forcing most of the Blue Lions' shots to come from long range. Unable to penetrate the middle, Washington hit a dismal 29 per cent in the first half. Greenfield's stocky frontline controlled the boards and shut out Washington's big gun underneath, John Denen, in the first two quarters.

Greenfield held Washington to just 19 points in the first half most of those from way out by Doug Phillips while hitting a hot 45 per cent from the floor.

Greenfield took advantage of the numerous Lion turnovers and the Tigers were able to cut down on Washington's usually effective fast-break by getting back quickly on defense.

It was all Steve Willet in the first half for Greenfield, when the 6-foot-3 forward connected on six of seven from the field. Willet hit from close in with his running mates Gary Barr and Steve Harvey setting picks for the lanky senior cutting across the lane.

Washington's Doug Phillips kept pace with Willet in the first half hitting ten points, but he was the only offensive the Blue Lions could muster in the first 16 minutes. Willet hit one with three seconds left in the first half to put the Tigers up by eleven, 30-19.

Washington opened the second half with an eye on Willet, but where he left off big Steve Harvey took over. Harvey hit two baskets in a row near the end of the third quarter including a jumper at the buzzer to keep Greenfield's lead at eleven, despite a six point spree in 15 seconds by the Blue Lions.

Opening the fourth quarter, both teams exchanged several baskets. Washington started to get hot and the Lions press forced some Greenfield turnovers.

Reserve Ed DeWees hit a layup and was fouled with 3:47 left to put the Lions within four points. DeWees had a chance to cut the lead to three with the freethrow. The shot was off the front of the rim and Phillips and Denen narrowly missed a couple of tips in the scramble for the rebound.

Phillips fouled Harvey in the melee and the Tigers center hit both ends of a 1-1 putting Greenfield up by six. A couple of steals by Tiger guards Bill Flynn and Joe Stewart put Greenfield up by ten and the game out of reach.

Harvey and Willet hit for 18 and 17 points respectively, and sharpshooting Flynn had 16 for Greenfield which shot 47 per cent from the field.

Phillips had 16 points for Washington with Byrd improving in the second half to finish with 13. Senior guard Mark Shaw had a fine game on both ends of the court finishing his high school career with 12 points. The Lions hit on 38 per cent from the floor.

Greenfield will now move into the class AA district tournament at Rio Grande this week with first round action slated for Wednesday.

MT wrestlers take 5th in sectional

Miami Trace Wrestling Coach Glenn Jacobsen took 13 young grapplers to the sectional wrestling meet in Lancaster Saturday.

Although none of the Panther wrestlers qualified for this week's district meet, it was far from being a disappointing day.

Heading the field in team totals was Chillicothe with 111 points and eight district qualifiers followed by Athens with 94 points and six qualifiers. Lancaster finished a close third with 92½ points and five qualifiers. Marietta was next with 65½ and four district qualifiers. Then Miami Trace followed closely by Logan with 32½ and Portsmouth finished last with a dismal five points.

Points are awarded to the first four finishers in each weight class plus extra points for a pin. The top two wrestlers in each class qualified for the district meet.

Miami Trace's young team had trouble with the opposition's more experienced wrestlers. Several of Saturday's opponent schools reportedly have junior high school wrestling programs. Coach Jacobsen looks for nothing but improvement from next year's squad with only two seniors on the team this year.

One of those seniors, Mark Moore, wrestled Saturday and he placed the highest for the Panthers with a third place finish in the 185 pound class. Moore won in overtime by referee's decision. He finished his last season with a 16-4 record.

Seven other Panther wrestlers made it to the consolation round with a chance for third place. League champ Jay Crummy at 167 pounds lost by a narrow 5-3 margin and Kirk Stuckey, 155, lost in overtime in a long match, 2-0. Crummy ended the season with a 14-5 mark and Stuckey finished at 9-12.

TAKE DOWN — Miami Trace's Kirk Stuckey looks for a good grip against an Athens wrestler in the consolation round of Saturday's sectional meet. Stuckey and his opponent wrestled for nine minutes before the match ended with the Athens wrestler taking a 2-0 decision. (Photo by Phil Lewis)

Marc Miramontez, 112 pounds, got a chance at third place, but he was pinned as were Harold Hixon, 145, and Chris Schlichter, a heavyweight, in the final round. Bruce Finning, 119, dropped a 3-1 decision in the consolation.

Ex-reserve wrestler Harold Carr, moved up a weight class and to the varsity when senior Don Dutton suffered a leg injury earlier in the season, took an impressive 4-3 lead in his 175 pound match before being pinned in consolation action.

There is always next year for the Miami Trace wrestlers. Coach

Jacobsen had five freshmen, six sophomores, and two juniors wrestling varsity this year. The future outlook for the Panther wrestlers is nothing but promising.

Unioto drops final

Adena had no trouble eliminating Unioto from post season play by blasting the Shermans, 69-49, in the finals of the class A sectional at Chillicothe Saturday night.

Adena came out gunning to take a 37-24 half time lead and Unioto could never get things going to fall behind by as much as 27 points in the second half.

Adena's Clark Gilmore was the game's leading scorer with 21 points and teammate Rick Hill chipped in 17 to move Adena into next week's district tournament at Chillicothe.

Jeff Throckmorton led Unioto with 15 points and 5-foot-7 center Greg Alcorn finished his high school career with 14 points.

The Shermans finished the season with a 13-8 record and a third place finish in the South Central Ohio League. Unioto will graduate its starting five.

Circleville takes sectional final

Circleville extended its perfect record to 20-0 with an easy 63-44 win over Logan Elm to take first place in the class AA sectional in Columbus Saturday.

Circleville had a tougher time with Logan Elm early in the regular season beating the Braves by eleven points. In that first meeting, 6-foot-2 George Moore hit for 22 points and Logan Elm still hasn't found the key to stopping the junior center as Moore led all scorers with 17 points and pulled down 14 rebounds.

Coach of the year quits at Jefferson

DAYTON, Ohio (AP)—Vince Shelby, who guided the Dayton Jefferson football team to two undefeated seasons and was named the Associated Press' 1974 Class AA high school coach of the year, has resigned.

Shelby said he was quitting as football coach, track coach and athletic director because of "salary considerations" and the fact he thought the administration was not giving strong enough support to the school's athletic program.

Spitz wins Marathon

ATHENS, Ohio (AP) — Duane Spitz of Holt, Mich., took the lead at the two-mile mark and stayed ahead the rest of the way to win the Athens Marathon Sunday.

Senior co-captains Harold Reed and Perry Hoskins hit for double figures again. Reed had 14 and Hoskins contributed 12.

Circleville, ranked first in the class AA final poll, took a five point lead into the locker room at half time. Then the Tigers blew Logan Elm off the court in the third period to take a 42-30 lead going into the last eight minutes.

The Tigers poured in 21 points in the final period to insure a place in the class AA district tournament at Columbus this week.

TV Viewing

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — On Jan. 6, NBC's "Another World" soap opera went from a half-hour to an hour in length. Come April 21, the network's "Days of Our Lives" will do the same thing. Why?
"Because I think the hour form is the coming form for daytime drama," says Lin Bolen, NBC's vice president for daytime programs. "It also allows us to do a better show creatively."
Does this mean all NBC soapers eventually will each run an hour?
"There's a good chance of this happening," she said, adding that audience studies NBC ran after "Another World" added another 30 minutes showed the program had far higher ratings than before.

"We also found that the women felt it was a better program, that the stories move faster, that it's more involved and that the scenes play better," she said. "Which is true, because we now have 12-minute scenes in the show as opposed to three-and four-minute scenes."
NBC now has five soap operas and six game shows on the air. But one half-hour soaper, "How to Survive a Marriage," is being divorced from the network's schedule to make room for the new "Days."
Does NBC plan to drop a game show or two to make room for lengthening the remaining soap operas?
"Well, if we keep expanding we're going to have to do something, aren't we?" Miss Bolen asked, somewhat mysteriously.
She was asked when a third hour-long soap opera will be on NBC.
A CBS spokesman says his network has discussed making either "The Young and the Restless" or "As the World Turns" into hour-long soapers. But no decision has been made, pending closer scrutiny of what success NBC will have with its pair of 60-minute sagas.
Miss Bolen was asked about the possibility of starting an hour-long game show, just to give devotees of that form equal time.
"I don't really think you could sustain the game drama for an hour," she said. "But you never know."

Chessie fears overloading of rail lines

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP)—Officials of the Chessie System Inc. say they are concerned that the restructuring of financially troubled rail companies in the government-supported Conrail system may overburden the healthy railroads.

Sen. Taft faces cataract surgery

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — Recovery from a heart attack has been sufficient for Sen. Robert Taft Jr. to undergo a previously-scheduled operation to remove a cataract from his right eye, according to physicians for the Ohio Republican.

Taft suffered a heart attack in January while the Senate was in session. He has been recuperating at his home here and aides report that he has been progressing well.

He entered Christ Hospital Sunday to prepare for Tuesday's surgery. The operation is similar to one he had on his left eye in January, 1974.

The senator said he anticipated spending several days in the hospital after the operation, but hoped he would be able to return to his job within a month.

"To require Chessie and the other strong lines to meet tax-supported rail competition would not only be unjust to them but injurious as well," Chessie told shareholders this week in its annual report.

Chessie is the parent company of the Chesapeake & Ohio and Baltimore & Ohio railroads.

The best way to revitalize the financially troubled railroads would be to free them from the restructuring network of "encumbering, duplicatory facilities and trackage, such as underutilized branch lines," Chessie said.

"The resulting smaller yet stronger rail system should be able to provide essential transportation service and pay its own way," Chessie officials said.

The railroad said it must invest up to $1 billion within five years to handle needed growth in its coal traffic.

Chessie said more coal is a key to revitalizing the northeastern railroads and easing energy pressure on oil.

The railroad said it expects coal production along its tracks to increase 50 per cent during the next five years. Chessie added that its coal traffic this year should be 10 per cent above last year's total of 83 million tons carried.

Stamps In The News

AP Newsfeatures By SYD KRONISH

Albert Schweitzer, one of the greats of this century, will receive special philatelic tribute from West Germany on Jan. 15. A new 70-pfennig stamp bearing a full face portrait of Dr. Schweitzer commemorates the 100th anniversary of his birth.

Awarded the Peace Prize of German Book Dealers in 1951, Schweitzer won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1952. He achieved world-wide acclaim not only as a physician and humanitarian but also as a theologian, philosopher and musician. In fact, his early career was financed by his performances on the organ. Schweitzer died in Africa in 1965.

Also issued by the Federal Republic of Germany was a set of four stamps as part of its "Famous Women" series in conjunction with the International Year of Woman. Honored are Annette Kolb, Ricarda Huch, Else Lasker-Schuler and Gertrude von le Fort - all of whom won fame for their contributions to German literature. Their portraits and dates are depicted on the stamps, ranging from the 30-pfennig to the 70-pfennig.

All of these new stamps soon will be available at your local dealers.

With listings of 1,935 stamps issued during the past year and with 42,066 price changes, Volume III of the Scott Standard Postage Stamp Catalog is now being distributed. The catalog covers all the stamps of Continental Europe and its colonies, the nations of Africa, Asia and Latin America.

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Many Reasons for Dizziness

I am 71. I'm in fine health. The only thing that bothers me is that I get dizzy when I get up or lie down too quickly. Please explain this.

Mr. T. O'B., Ore.

Dear Mr. O'B.: Almost all people of your age have some narrowing of the blood vessels due to arteriosclerosis. This may not be severe, but with it comes a loss of elasticity of the blood vessels. Few people know that in the inner lining of the arteries there is a muscular layer which contracts and expands. The arteries that lead from the heart through the neck to the brain may be affected by a sudden change in position. A fleeting sensation of imbalance or dizziness then occurs. Many people in younger age groups experience the same sensation. In their case it is usually due to relatively low blood pressure. High blood pressure, too, is a known reason for these transient sensations. A great many people who allow long periods of time to go by without solid foods may experience the feeling you describe. Doctors notice this particularly in people who diet in a peculiar way by not eating breakfast or lunch. In your case, you must simply remember not to make sudden, rapid changes of position. When you lie down, take a few seconds more to adjust yourself and your blood pressure to a new position.

Do you think that karate and its allied exercises are safe for young boys and girls?

Mrs. T.A., Wis.

Dear Mrs. A.: When these disciplines are taught by reliable instructors and when their potential dangers are respected, the sport can be an excellent one. Those who are highly trained know the damage that a single blow can cause to the neck, the liver and the spleen. Some youngsters, in their enthusiasm, have inflicted severe punishment on others who have not been taught to protect themselves against attack. Karate as a sport is an exhilarating one. As a method of violence, it is as dangerous as carrying a loaded gun. If you are thinking of sending your own child for karate lessons, be sure that the teaching and direction are done by an accredited and reliable karate educator.

DR. COLEMAN welcomes letters from readers, and, while he cannot undertake to answer each one, he will use questions in his column whenever possible and when they are of general interest. Address your letters to Dr. Coleman in care of this newspaper.

Opening lead - six of spades.

Declarer now cashed dummy's trumps, discarding his clubs, and West found himself inexorably squeezed on the last trump. He discarded a heart and Sharif won the last three tricks with the K-Q-9 of hearts. At the second table, the Finnish declarer, Tourminen, also got to seven spades and made the grand slam by the same squeeze to produce a sensational standoff on the hand.
